Paula White, a megachurch pastor who heads up the controversial Atlanta, Georgia-based Family Talk Ministries, has accused lawmakers in Louisiana of being “wolves in sheep’s clothing,” because they aren’t doing enough to fight the spread of HIV, according to WGNO. Instead of devoting political capital to dealing with the AIDS epidemic in Louisiana, White said, the state’s Republican lawmakers were “trying to use [HIV/AIDS] to get brownie points from the gays.” ADVERTISEMENT “It’s a pack of wolves in sheep’s clothing,” White said. White, who runs the 400,000 member-strong Mount Paran Church, told WGNO that gay state Sen. Troy Carter (D) and state Rep. Charles J. Brann (R) had deliberately introduced legislation to limit access to abortion. “I hope you know what you’re doing,” White said to those members of the medical community who support such measures. “You are killing people,” she said. “These are people that have a condition called AIDS.” White also criticized Brann for not doing enough to fight HIV. “I think he needs to deal with the needs of the people, and do the job he was elected to do,” she said, insisting that Brann should look into whether or not the state should be taking over the regulation of prostitution. ADVERTISEMENT “It might save some lives,” White said. The Advocate newspaper noted that White had criticized President Barack Obama in 2008 for not doing enough to stop HIV. “I told Obama when he was running in 2007, the Bible says, ‘Render not evil for evil,’” White told WGNO at the time. “Render not evil
