Animals of the species rats, mice, rabbits and dogs with experimentally induced atrophy of skeletal muscles, manifesting changes in amino acid metabolism, were found to synthesize low amounts of free proteins, to have low protein content in the skeletal muscles, to exhibit a decreased content of muscle protein in them and to have a reduced ability to excrete protein. Under experiments performed with the aid of leucine administered in free or bound form the effect of its administration was evaluated.Despite the recent global incident that occurred at Nijmegen, Netherlands, where a baby was attacked and killed by a cat, pet ownership is still a very safe activity. As a reminder, in case the reader may have missed the coverage of the incident, the cat killed and then ate a 2-day-old baby boy. Such incidents usually take place in developing countries, where parents are unaware of their rights regarding animals. In the Netherlands, they are known to exist and parents in the country can actually have their cats “declared dangerous” in order to ban them from their premises. There are two main things parents can do in order to prevent such a scenario from ever occurring in their household. Dogs Children are afraid of cats and generally want to keep them away from them as much as possible, as they think that they are just a little bit scary. This is especially true when they are babies. If you are in a place where cats are allowed, the best option is to keep them away from babies. Cats When it comes to cats, there is no need to keep them away from babies. They will always protect their baby more than any human. Most parents are aware of this and will teach their children about proper animal handling. Even though they may be aggressive or cause harm to a baby when they're little, they are not dangerous.

immobilized anti-clathrin antibody. The precipitates were eluted with 0.4 M arginine examined by sodium dodecyl sulfate-
