Labeling of mucosal antibodies in isolated bronchial cells and leukocytes with ¹²⁵Iodine-cetuximab. Cetuximab is a human monoclonal antibody against the EGFR that has been well tolerated in clinical trials. The route of administration of cetuximab is however mainly intravenous. There is a need for more specific and sensitive assays that allow testing for cetuximab-EGFR complexes in tissues. Previously, we detected such complexes in tissues by radioiodinated cetuximab. We now develop a radioiodinated, direct binding assay to cetuximab-EGFR in the presence of mucosal antibodies. We isolated cetuximab from sera of patients with EGFR-positive tumors. The radiolabelled cetuximab was in vitro incubated with isolated mucosal cells and leukocytes. We measured the radioactivity of the supernatant by scintigraphy and validated the results by ELISA. In contrast to peripheral blood leukocytes and monocytes the cetuximab-EGFR complexes were retained intracellularly in epithelial and goblet cells. These cells express high amounts of EGFR, MUC2 and MUC5AC. We showed that the pattern of cetuximab binding correlates with MUC2 and MUC5AC expression in lung tissues. These data show that cetuximab is retained intracellularly in epithelial and goblet cells and that the intracellular binding of cetuximab is dependent on mucin expression. This binding of cetuximab could be an explanation for the good tolerance of cetuximab in clinical practice. Automotive, Home & Industrial Deadl-Tek
