Signaling of the peptidoglycan-associated lipoprotein receptor by peptidoglycan. The peptidoglycan-associated lipoprotein receptor (PAL) recognizes bacterial lipopolysaccharides and peptidoglycans (PGN), and may play a role in innate immunity. In this study, we identified peptidoglycan-derived fragments capable of stimulating cytokine production by human cells. Pal was expressed in the human monocytic cell line THP-1 as a homodimer. Binding of the receptor with PGN stimulated production of tumor necrosis factor-alpha (TNF-alpha) and monocyte chemoattractant protein-1 (MCP-1), whereas N-acetyl-beta-D-glucosaminidase treatment reduced this signal. PGN and lipopolysaccharide also induced TNF-alpha and interleukin (IL)-8 production in human embryonic kidney cells, which do not express PAL. It is concluded that PAL is stimulated by PGN and that PGN-derived fragments or components may have a regulatory role in the host response to bacterial infections. Q: How to work with dynamic data in MFC? My problem is that I have a DataObject which needs a certain value, not after construction, but with each readable operation. Is there any easy way of doing this? I already figured out that I could make the data member a static variable, but I could also keep a pointer to the value instead. Thanks for any tips! A: You shouldn't
