Q: Proper use of Master and Detail in Orientdb - select by class I am having a hard time parsing the documentation. I understand that the master/detail relationship is there to assign multiple classes to a object. Based on the documentation I am able to select a row with the class "a:set" by doing the following: select * from "a:set" The problem is that I want to assign classes to rows based on a specific field from that class. For example I want all objects that have the color "green" to have the class "a:green" (the colors are just an example). I am not sure how to translate this into a valid select query. Do I use a left join with "a:set" and? How do I use the field in the left join. A: for this you have to create a class like this : @Slf4j @Entity @Table(name="SET_COLORS") class SetColor extends BaseEntity { @Field private String color; .... } and then you can add an instruction to the query : select c1, c2, c3 from "a:set" left join "SET_COLORS" c1 on c1.color = 'green' left join "SET_COLORS" c2 on c1.color = 'red' left join "SET_COLORS" c3 on c1.color = 'blue' or using find() you can do this : select e from a:set e where exists (select 1 from SET_COLORS cs where cs.color in ('green','red','blue')) Now Commenting On: D-backs place infielder on bereavement list Email Print Press Release | PHOENIX, ARIZONA - The Arizona Diamondbacks have placed infielder/outfielder Willie Bloomquist on the bereavement list, retroactive to March 14, and assigned infielder Charlie Culberson to the Triple-A Tucson roster.
