I was reading the RFC 792 and when I was looking at the "Reply-Action" feature, I noticed that the value for this field is "ask" (not "ignore"). But when I checked the RFC 792 for the "Reply-Action" field in the "Destination Option" object, I saw that the value for this field is "treat" (not "ask"). Actually, I thought there should be "ignore" as the value for the "Reply-Action" field, but I later came across the above mentioned RFC and checked the value for the "Reply-Action" field in the

"Destination Option" object, and it was "ask", not "ignore". But then why there is an error in the RFC? And if the value for the "Reply-Action" field is "ask" (not "ignore"), then how to send the ICMP Reply back to the sender? A: Take a look at RFC 792, in particular the section that starts with If a Destination Address option has been received containing a Destination Option Acknowledgment option and the ACK bit is not set in this option, then it is an error if the value of this option is other than "ignore". There can be no doubt that the specification was purposely unclear. The SEC has scheduled a news conference to release the records that led them to file charges of fraud and bid rigging against a Texas-based company named Access Denied. The group will include John Thogmartin, the former chairman of the SEC, who is still being paid almost a million dollars a year, and Eric Schneiderman, the attorney general of New York. The SEC filed the charges in New York yesterday. According to the filings, Access Denied offered and sold access to Wall Street executives, and paid kickbacks to them. The kickbacks were implemented by a firm called Art Securities. The SEC alleges that Art Securities paid seven of its top executives — a total 1cdb36666d

Archive for the 'Panzer Grenadiers' tag The PC Gamer's 2013 Game of the Year is Terraria, a game that mixes isometric action, RPG elements, and a crafting system that lets you create weapons, armor, and items from the world around you. The company behind the game, Spry Fox, has announced its first patch, which adds new playable races and classes in an early version of the game and also adds a voice acting system for the NPCs. The Duke calls me to camp, and tells me that he has a change of plans. This time, he says, my company will fight for their own interests, and I will be their leader. I am not sure what this means, but I do not have time to ask, for Duke is alive with excitement. "Yes, yes! You'll do fine, Duke. I'm sure you'll thrive in your new leadership role. But you have a day to celebrate. This is a big day for you, yes? You get to choose your first round of draenei. You are the one who said the time is right. Here, you have me in a headlock. If you break it, you're in trouble. If not, it will be a snap for you to win the game." I haven't even talked to the draenei in a day, and they are already mocking me. "I wasn't sure how you would respond to the draenei," the Duke said as we walked toward the Black Temple. "They have often been a thorn in the side of the Horde. They want a free Northrend, but they won't take no for an answer. While their leadership in the north is problematic, I have faith in you. In time, you will demonstrate that they have been nothing but trouble for you. As you have for everyone else, you will deal with them." Duke brings me to the Black Temple. He explains that the draenei have a role to play in the ongoing war with the Alliance and informs me that I will be welcomed inside. "This is your time," Duke told me, as we made our way to the sanctuary. "You must move quickly. We will be short on time. We must reach the Halls of Reflection soon, and begin to prepare for the arrival of Thrall
