Photo by Jessica Stanley | Carolina Public PressJustin DeJarnette, upper left, with other members of the Corps of Cadets, helps graduate Kyle Whitener of Clayton, N.C., shake hands with college President Carol Folt during the ceremony at Carolina Pines High School. On Saturday, Sept. 27, over 100 high school students attended the UNC-hosted graduation ceremony at the campus. At UNC-Chapel Hill's Pines Campus, several high school students were hit with a double dose of history - and a salute to Old Carolina. They also got a chance to say goodbye to some of their most cherished instructors and experienced some of the unique and fun graduation festivities that are not normally available to teenagers. It was the last weekend for the Pines Campus to host a graduation ceremony and the school was bursting with excitement as students were coming up to claim their diplomas, shake hands with their collegiate classmates and embrace their fellow corpsmen and cadets. Last year, there were only about 15 graduates, and this year, according to graduation ceremony coordinator Linda Anderson, there were about double that, at about 35. About 50 to 70 students are expected for the ceremony. That Saturday's event was also the first time the campus held a graduation ceremony since Hurricane Florence in September 2018. While the high school-based ceremony is the traditional graduation event of the UNC system, last Saturday's was a special occasion. High schools from across the state, including schools in Charlotte, served as hosts and hosted special guests, including Charlotte Mayor Vi Lyles and county commissioners, and also had their own graduation ceremonies to celebrate their seniors, and to say goodbye. Holly Bubar, one of the school counselors at Pines, said they worked long and hard to make sure graduates could not only graduate on Saturday, but also the high school event was the culmination of a lifetime of growing and learning at Pines. "I feel like it's a really great celebration for our students because we're so proud of them. They've worked hard this year," she said. "This is their moment. This is their moment to be celebrated." d0c515b9f4
