“HyperMotion Technology is a huge leap forward for players,” said David Rutter, Creative Director of FIFA. “Players will have more freedom in how they move, tackle and control the ball; while physics-based impacts all but eliminating the need to perform unnatural controls and allow us to create the authentic, direct and reactive gameplay experience that we've all been wanting." "So far in FIFA, the movement and the reaction of the players has been pretty good," said Craig Duncan, Studio Manager, DICE. "But to make it feel really good, we needed to make a really fluid system that can react to the force of the ball and players' movement. We've put more muscle into our virtual players to make them react realistically." In addition to reactivity and physicality, FIFA 22 also uses "AI Drills," which enable AI teams to play in match conditions. AI players will respond to touchline tactical and functional flicks and turn, so the moment tactics change, the AI team will change too. FIFA 22 also introduces players with specific attributes and behaviors, on top of the existing standard team attributes. Fans will be able to customize their favorite players for meaningful differences in unique attributes. In-game, players can use the FUT Draft to add further customization to an already customizable player. As in FIFA 19, all new content in FIFA 22 will be available from day one, including all Career Game modes, such as FUT Champions, FUT Pro Clubs, FIFA Ultimate Team, FIFA Ultimate Team Price League, and more. FIFA 22 - Available September 27, 2017 Gameplay A new way to control in-game movement FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay. “HyperMotion Technology is a huge leap forward for players,” said David Rutter, Creative Director of FIFA. “Players will have more freedom in how they move, tackle and control the ball; while physics-based impacts all but eliminating the need to perform unnatural controls and allow us to create the authentic, direct and reactive gameplay experience that It has been 20 years since the earth has been cleansed of most of the human race through a nuclear holocaust, which left many refugees and a few thousand diehards scattered around the globe. The world has changed. The world has become a whole lot more dangerous. The world is now populated with many uncivilized creatures – a lot of mutants and Revenants are walking on the lands. Their numbers are increasing and their weapons are getting more powerful. The most dangerous of those creatures is a super-mutant, a creation of the power of deep research of one of the military units. This organism is deadly to the humans, and it's control is always after the virus, which they call Mutation Virus. This virus is capable of assimilating the DNA of the infected organism and changing its key biological functions, by interfering with them, making it a greater monster. It seems that the antigen of this creature is human, which is necessary in order for the mutation to occur. Humanity is currently surviving in makeshift shelters with no electricity and living off of the wild vegetation, not to mention the resources from the military and the armories. This virus is pretty dangerous as it can be transmitted in many ways, including touch and oral way. Nobody knows for how long it will be around, so preparation is key. The Alliance is making every effort to discover where the virus is, and exterminate it while it's still small. The virus is creating other things as it assimilates the DNA of some of the animals. A lot of the creatures affected by the virus have already developed some kind of immunity to the virus, making it very easy for them to hunt and kill the virus itself.
